REFEREE

Data access for refereeing and replication

This research was conducted in a Research Room (RR) jointly operated by the Hungarian Central Statistical Office (CSO) and the Databank of the Center for Economic and Regional Sciences (CERS). For a description of the RR and the rules of work, visit <https://adatbank.krtk.mta.hu/en/kutatoszoba/> Background. The CCTV-controlled RR is available for projects led by researchers at the CERS and the Center for Social Sciences. Other researchers, including assistants, are also eligible as approved project participants. Any output produced in the RR must undergo an output-checking procedure conducted by the CSO. Copying data from the servers and computer screens is strictly forbidden.

Access for referees. If a referee wants to check the data and computations, the Databank starts a Referee Project in which the referee acts as a project participant. The referee can work in the RR personally or by hiring a local assistant. The required data will be uploaded to the referee's personal folder. The names of the referees and assistants are kept confidential and will not be shared with the authors.

Access for replication. The person willing to replicate the results can join the author's project and attend the RR in person.

Server users. Example: Admin3

Data access for refereeing and replication

Background. The Admin3 dataset was compiled and anonymized by the National Information Service (NISZ) using data from registers of the health authority, the pension insurance fund, the public employment service, the tax authority, and the Office of Education. The data were cleaned and transformed into a fixed-format monthly panel by the Databank of the Center for Economic and Regional Sciences (CERS). See KRTK Databank (2024) and Sebők (2018). The data is available to the international academic community.

Access for referees. If the referee wants to check the data and the computations, the Databank opens a Referee Folder on one of its servers. The required data will be uploaded to this folder; the referees can work with them online and request the Databank to copy and send the output to them. The Databank keeps the referee's name confidential. Referees can initiate the opening of a folder by writing to adatkeres@krtk.mta.hu.

Access for replication. The person willing to replicate the results can require access to the data by contacting the authors. The authors can initiate the inclusion of the replicant in their project.
